

CALL FOR A "LIVE LIBRARY"

New York Students Rise in Revolt Against Gloomy Tomb With Musty Tomes.

A combination library and social center is wanted by students of the College of the City of New York, the New York Sun states. Many of them say so in a petition prepared by a committee of the student council and sent to Lee Kohns, chairman of the library committee of the trustees.

"The new library," the petition reads, "should not be made a gloomy tomb for books. It should not be an imposing reading hall in whose chill precincts the awe-stricken student will do his prescribed reading under the watchful gaze of an eagle-eyed monitor teacher and the depressing shadow of innumerable 'silence' signs."

Some suggested features are: A reading hall with shelves full of standard authors, plenty of writing tables with complete writing outfits, retiring rooms "where students may chat and smoke and recreate themselves in gentle social relaxation," and meeting rooms for organizations. The petition continues:

"We want a library where we students will not only meet the great men of the past in their literary creations, but where we also can clasp hands with the man across the table who is working out the same problem. We want a library providing for the human side of its readers, for that intimate discussion which alone can vivify to our eyes the ideals embodied in cold type."

SLIGHT CHANCE

She—And did papa give you any hopes that you could marry me?
He—Well—er—yes. He said I was the last man in the world he'd think of letting you marry.

STILL INTACT.

"Your friend Dubwaite seems to have a very good opinion of himself."
"Oh, Dubwaite is hardly to blame for that."

"Why not?"
"Well, you see, he has never been a candidate for office and nobody has ever taken the trouble to puncture his conceit."

NOTHING MORE REQUIRED.

"Well, did you uphold your end of the conversation with Miss Gadders?"

"Of course."
"Her tongue never tires."
"That's true. But I can say 'Yes,' and 'No' about as well as anybody else."

MAKES A DIFFERENCE.

"Do you mean to tell me that it is cheaper to keep a touring car than a horse?"

"I find it so."
"You will pardon me, but I can hardly believe you."
"I used to bet on the horse I owned."

NOT ENCOURAGING.

Harker—Did the girl's father ratify your engagement?

Parker—Yes, in a way. When I mentioned it to him he said "Rats!"

PRACTICAL SUGGESTION.

"Mine, indeed, is a sunny lot in life."

"Then why don't you plant some shade trees on it?"

THE DOCTOR'S PROFIT.

Doctor—Well, I hope you profited by my advice.

Patient—Yes, doctor; but not so much as you did.

HIS WAY.

"He has such a dry way of telling his jokes."

"That's what whets people's desire for more."

ACTOR OF THE OLD SCHOOL

Impressive, Not to Say Stilted, Dignity Was Chief Stock in Trade of One Thespian.

Everyone is familiar with the lament for the good old actors of a better day. Well, we had some of them (in the Booth-Barrett company)—the palmy-daisies. One, a most likable chap, whom I shall call Brown, was quite without pose, and made no pretense of taking his art too seriously. I believe he had been a bricklayer, and so he was cast for all the kings. He played the king of France in "Lear," and so always left the theater early. He once said to me: "Ed, how does the darned old play end, anyway?"

Brown also played King Louis in "Richelieu." Perhaps he was cast for these royal personages because he walked and talked in a most uncommon way. No one could accuse him of "crooking the pregnant hinges of the knee" for any purpose whatsoever. He did not walk; he stalked. One night in Salt Lake City we had a drunken man in the gallery who was inclined to be both talkative and critical. You may remember the scene where the king turns from Julie and says, "Speak to her, Baradas; I am not marble." Our inebriated critic leaned well forward, and in a voice audible to everyone in the theater, murmured, "Marble? No, d—n you, you're wood."—Edwin Milton Royle, in Harper's Magazine.

LION SOOTHED BY PERFUME

Angry Animal Gets a Whiff of Attar of Roses, and Almost at Once Becomes Peaceful.

A new method has been discovered for curbing the temper of lions. It is simple and safe, and, according to Charles Smith, boss of a Chicago menagerie, it is highly effective. It consists merely of permitting a lion to whiff attar of roses.

Smith gave a demonstration at the Coliseum, when he sprinkled the perfume over a handkerchief and entered the cage of King Leo. Leo was sleeping, but when the cage door was opened he prepared to spring. Smith dangled the handkerchief in front of the lion's nose, and Leo sniffed heavily. Then he buried his nose in the cloth. He seemed more contented than when sleeping, and permitted Smith to brush his mane and head and pat him on the back.

Smith said he had been experimenting with perfume with the lions for several months, and is convinced that the aroma has a remarkably peaceful and soothing effect on wild beasts.

ENOUGH FOR BOTH.

Him—Darling, I would ask you to be my wife, but I'm afraid my income of only two thousand dollars a year would not be sufficient for us to get along on.

Her—Oh, yes it would. I can dress on fifteen hundred dollars a year, and we would have all the rest for our living and household expenses.

INHERITANCE.

Knicker—Jones has an awful memory.

Bocker—No wonder; his mother couldn't remember how to swim and his father was a witness in a lawsuit.

PREPAREDNESS.

Stella—In case of war, how many of your relatives would go?

Bella—Well, there are seventeen men to whom I have promised to be a sister.

ITS KIND.

"What would you suggest as selections for this concert for the coal workers?"

"Some songs in a minor key."

GETTING TOGETHER.

Harduppe—That fellow Flubdub must have money.

Borrowell—So must I. Introduce me.—Town Topics.

TWO DOLLARS, PLEASE.

"What would you recommend for somnambulism, doctor?"

"Well, you might try insomnia."—Boston Evening Transcript.

DIVISION OF LABOR.

First Baby—Is your dad going to march for preparedness?

Second Baby—Yes, he walks while I prepare to yell.

UNIVERSITY HONORS 2 FORMER STUDENTS

Honorary Degrees Conferred Upon Three Men at Commencement.

Three men were honored with the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at the recent Commencement exercises of the University of Missouri at Columbia. Two of the men are graduates of the University of Missouri and the other is a graduate of the University of Nebraska. The honorary title was also to have been conferred upon Speaker Champ Clark, but Mr. Clark was unable to leave Washington. Those who received the LL. D. degrees are:

Curtis F. Marbut, graduate of the University of Missouri and of Harvard University. Former professor of geology in the University of Missouri, now in charge of the national soil survey organized by the U. S. department of Agriculture. He inaugurated the Missouri soil survey, and is known by his publications as the greatest living authority on the soils of Missouri and probably of the United States.

Henry Jackson Waters, president of the Kansas State Agricultural College. A graduate of the University of Missouri, and former student of the universities of Leipzig and Zurich. Formerly professor of agriculture in Pennsylvania State College and former dean of the agricultural faculty of the University of Missouri.

Roscoe Pound, dean of the Harvard University School of Law. Graduate of the University of Nebraska with the degrees of B. A., M. A., Ph. D. Former professor of law in Northwestern and Harvard universities. Assisted in recent reorganization and development of the University of Missouri School of Law.

Remedies for "Chiggers."

Washington, D. C., June 12—If a bath in hot water, or in water containing salt or strong soap, is taken within a few hours after exposure in shrubbery and weeds infested with "chiggers," or "red bugs," no ill effects will be experienced. After a long exposure, however, a bath has practically no effect, and direct remedies are necessary.

After irritation has set in, and small red spots appear, the application of a moderate strong solution of ammonia to the affected parts is recommended by the Department of Agriculture's entomologists. A supersaturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, or common cooking soda or saleratus, will afford relief. Liberal applications should be made until the irritation subsides. If the suffering is severe, a dilute tincture of iodine or collodion should be lightly applied.

Noted M. U. Alumnus Dead.

Harrie Merton Lyon, one of the most famous graduates of the University of Missouri at Columbia, died recently in New York. He was a well known short-story and magazine writer. He was graduated from the University in 1905 and went to New York, where he soon became prominent in literary circles. Lyon was known as the second O. Henry by his admirers. Upon the death of O Henry, he was chosen to finish some of that writer's uncompleted works.

We Certainly Do Love Work.

We are prepared to do better work and more of it than ever. Why half mix your concrete the old way? Let us mix your concrete the up-to-date way. We have the best mixer on the market. Your concrete does not cost you as much as it did the old way. Yet it is a hundred per cent better, because when we mix it, it's mixed. That's all. JOHN L. ASHURST.

USE OF SPRING ONIONS

Valuable Addition to Diet—Served in Salads or Cooked as Greens.

The onion is an important vegetable, not only because of its direct food value, but also because it is a common and most useful seasoning for a great variety of foods. Like all succulent vegetables, however, it is low in nutritive value, containing, as it does, about nine-tenths water and only one-tenth food substance. Nevertheless, the material it contributes is well worth having. The onion owes its flavor to a pungent, oil-like substance containing sulphur, and it must not be overlooked that sulphur is an important mineral element, which the body needs.

At this season of the year one of the welcome additions to the diet is the spring onion. It is commonly eaten raw and may thus form part of a salad, or it may be cooked and served in a variety of ways. A little soda (one-fourth of a level teaspoonful to a dozen onions) should be added to the salted water in which they are cooked. Housekeepers frequently use a little of the finely chopped tops for seasoning salads, etc., particularly when onions are very young, more generally the tops are thrown away. According to the home economics experts of the department this should not be done, as they make a very palatable dish when properly cooked. The tops, including any of the white portion of the stalk which one does not wish to cook with the onions, should be washed several times, cut into pieces one half to an inch in length, and cooked in salted water to which baking soda in the proportion of one-fourth of a level teaspoonful to 2 quarts of the cut-up "greens" has been added. As soon as the onion greens are tender, pour off the water in which they were cooked, add butter, heat thoroughly, and serve on buttered toast. If one wishes a more substantial dish, it is easily made by putting a poached egg on top of each slice of toast and onions greens. Onion tops thus cooked are tender and, contrary to what one might expect from their pronounced odor when raw, are very mild in flavor as well.

The onions may be cooked with the greens or may be cooked and served separately, at the housekeeper's convenience. They add to the attractiveness of the dish if served on a bed of onion greens on toast. They are also very palatable buttered and served on toast like asparagus. In this case it is usual to cook with the onion all of the white stalk that is tender.

Serving green vegetables on toast is an economical as well as palatable method. It makes the vegetable "go further," adds considerably to the total food value of the dish, and is one more good way of using stale bread.

Wilnot Kenney went to Boonville Sunday morning for a few days' visit.

LOPPED OFF SEVENTEEN YEARS

Mrs. Jones, at 52, Looks 35, and Rides Horseback as Well as She Ever Could, Thanks to Cardui.

Onawa, Iowa.—Mrs. Anna Jones, of about 35. It was Cardui, the woman's tonic, that built me up. If I ever need a medicine for womanly troubles, I shall use Cardui, for it is certainly all that is claimed for it."

Are you getting old before your time—moping around with hollow eyes, drooped shoulders, no life to do anything? Brace up! Take Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has brought the glow of health to many thousands of women's faces, and made them glad to be alive, as is proven by the numerous letters similar to the above, we receive every day.

Finally, our druggist advised Cardui, the woman's tonic, for my complaint. I was so thin, my weight was 115. Now I weigh 163, and I am never sick. I ride horseback as well as I ever could. I am in fine health, at 52 years, thanks to Cardui. Some think I am

Ask your druggist about Card-u-I. He knows it's good. [JB-4]
